Some people find the workflows or the tools in Photoshop to be confusing and difficult to learn, but this can be downright frustrating for image editors who want to become a professional and have a career in photography and graphic design. In this article I will cover some of the workflow secrets for making high-quality images in Photoshop. Workflow Secrets for Photoshop There are too many workflow secrets to list, but here are a few topics that should be on the radar. These are the most important topics for Photoshop users: Workflow secrets for Photoshop From a graphic designer or web designer's perspective, Photoshop is already a pretty powerful tool. It is really easy to create high-quality images in Photoshop. You can also create your own workflow secrets for Photoshop. Selecting the Right File Format for Photoshop What file format should you choose when you start working with Photoshop? It can be confusing at the beginning. Photoshop is a powerful tool that requires the creation and import of images. Photoshop doesn't automatically recognize any file format.

The file formats that Photoshop can import are as follows: JPEG PNG TIFF Portable Network Graphics (PNG) files are a very common file format for image editing, and they are compact and very fast to download, so they work great for sending images to webpages or social media. When you create Photoshop files, you might use the following: RGB - RGB is the default file format for Photoshop. Luminance - Luminance is a best-fit-for-black-and-white format. CMYK - The CMYK format is suitable for printing. It supports the four primary colors — cyan, magenta, yellow and key (black). When you create your images in Photoshop, you have to convert the image to a format that is compatible with the output you want. This article explains the steps you can follow to convert images between formats. High-quality images are created and edited using the.psd (Photoshop Document) file format. The.psd file is an excellent format for creating a complete library of images that are needed for graphic design or graphic editing work. At the beginning of this article, I listed some of the workflow secrets for Photoshop. A Word about Photoshop for Graphic Designers Graphic designers can make use 388ed7b0c7

Nicholas Velo has emerged as one of the most exciting young talents in the industry, producing some amazing vision. I have personally seen his design of the Happy Living brand, a product that is quickly becoming a standard across the industry. It was clear to see in the last year how he has progressed, from the clean and simplistic design to one that is strong, unique and stunning. In this post I will look into the growing dimensions of his successful business, experience of the industry, career highlights and of course his philosophy. Nicholas may be only 18 years old but is already a well experienced junior designer. He completed a BSc in Industrial Design at the University of the West of England in Plymouth and now works for Gulliver Brand Creative as a project and visual consultant. Nicholas told me that: "When I was at art school I just saw print design as something I would not be happy doing. At the time I wasn't really interested in the 'craft' side of designing and I wasn't sure if I wanted to go into graphic design; I only ever saw myself working in the retail industry." The turning point for Nicholas came when he took part in an advertising design and promotion course at university. Nicholas told me that: "I'd been designing for friends and family but the course really showed me the potential, that I could start creating in my own name. I then realised that I could use my love of art and sketching to help more people and that designing and creating were not two separate things, both could be creative and applied to the same thing." Nicholas specialises in branding, design, illustration and typography and has a keen awareness of the market he is aiming for. He is well aware of his role in the industry and needs to stay abreast of new trends and styles to stay cutting edge. He has a keen understanding of how to use the internet to market himself and has used it to his advantage. Nicholas told me: "Social media has been essential for me. I take advantage of it all and I don't think I would be as successful without it." I am sure he is correct! Now I asked him the big question! What do you see for your future in the industry?"I want to be a world recognised brand designer and use my talents to support more brands, more people and make a difference", this is what Nicholas told me
