Kundali bhagya serial dekhna hai aaj ka.Q: The importance of list order I have four lists, each with around 50,000 elements. Each list has a similar but different order to the others. They are: list1, list2, list3, list4. How can I bring each list into a new, consistent order, where all the elements in each list are in a random order. I can't use delete, because my lists are already in use, and can't be removed from the system. I could definitely use a batch file, but I'm not sure how to go about that either. A: You are asking for a distributed version of the common sort function, which has a simple solution. Sort each list to a consistent order, then extract the five lists into new lists, then randomly shuffle the new lists. Alternatively, use a small number of shell commands to do the same thing. For example: sort list1 list2 list3 list4 > nul sort -R list1 list2 list3 list4 > nul sort list1 list2 list3 list4 | shuffle > newList1 sort -R list1 list2 list3 list4 | shuffle > newList2 sort list1 list2 list3 list4 | shuffle > newList3 sort -R list1 list2 list3 list4 | shuffle > newList4 sort list1 list2 list3 list4 | shuffle > newList5 Assuming that each list is
